2. On the basis of the information supplied in [REDACTED] memorandum, it would appear to us that the gift was a personal one from [REDACTED] rather than a gift to a United States Government employee from a foreign government. As such, there is in our opinion no legal requirement that the gift be reported to the State Department as required in cases of gifts from foreign governments, and we would interpose no legal objection to the retention of the gift by [REDACTED]. The memoranda are accordingly forwarded to your office for whatever action you may wish to take.
